Commodore's Letter

By the time you read this, it will be autumn already, but probably still hot and steamy! A great summer here in Hong Kong as usual, with mainly clear skies and a steady southwest monsoon trade wind keeping us cool (at least while boating if not around town). Occasional tropical storms have threatened us, from Doksuri (T8,) Vicente (T10), and Kai-tak (T8). The most severe was Super Typhoon Vicente, which played some havoc on 23rd to 24th July, with some damage to members' boats. I am pleased to note that our Club procedures were all exercised in a due and timely manner and our moorings and hardstandings proved okay.

The winds and visibility generally have been fine for us this summer, and our first five cruiser Summer Series races have been conducted in good sailing conditions with strong fleets. However, the dinghy Summer Series lost a couple of races to lack of wind. Fingers crossed for the Club's new boating event in late August, the ABC Fiesta, which will bring all types of Club boats together, from cruisers to motor vessels and sailing dinghies, in a cruise to Po Toi Island. Photos will be shown in the next issue of Horizons.

While all-weather boating types braved the tropical-weather excesses, with summer hazards of weather and high sun on the water, many members preferred the comfort of the Club pool and facilities, enjoying the comfort of the Clubhouse, restaurant and bar in civilised conditions.

The end of summer brings the traditional start of the sailing season: the Sunseeker Opening Regatta, a two-day event, on the 1st and 2nd of September, followed by a full programme of sailing and dinghy racing series. Enjoy.

General Manager's Letter

Dear Members,

Welcome back to a new season at the Aberdeen Boat Club after the summer break. I hope that those fortunate enough to escape the heat of Hong Kong had a wonderful holiday wherever it was.

New Sailing Season: On 1 and 2 September, the Club will once again hold the ABC Opening Regatta that traditionally launches the Hong Kong sailing season. This is the 33rd running of this very well-attended regatta and the ninth time Sunseeker Asia and Gordon Hui have sponsored it. Grateful thanks are given to Mr. Hui for his continued support of the race.

We expect a record number of entries this year with more J/80s and hopefully a fleet of Benneteaus and dinghies. Again this year, two professional race officers will ensure top-notch organization and running of this two-day event. A full report will be posted on our website after the race and included in the October issue of Horizons.

Special meals and events:

The ABC's food and beverage team has set many functions for you this month, including a curry night with free beer tasting, a Mid-Autumn Festival poolside barbeque and the return of the Saturday Indian lunch special featuring masala dosa, sambar, idly, and other items from Chef Yadav's fine recipe collection.

Murder-mystery dinner:

The ABC proudly presents another murder-mystery dinner in collaboration with Chunky Onion Productions. "Murder in Havana" is an interactive show performed during a sit-down dinner during which the audience is invited to dance, play games and solve the mystery. The party starts at 7 pm in the Waglan bar with a pre-dinner Cuban cocktail, dinner and the show is at 8 pm in the Harbour room. Please call us to book your table before it is too late.

For golf enthusiasts, on 28 September, The Hebe Haven Yacht Club invites the ABC Golf Society to a fundraising Golf Day in Kau Sai Chau to support the 10th anniversary of the 24-hour Dinghy Charity race on 6 and 7 October. If you would like to join us, please visit the ABC webpage under “Activities” and “Golf society” or contact us for more details. The ABC Golf Society’s next tournament will be held on 29 October at the Kau Sai Chau south course.

Fireworks: on 1 October, China’s National Day, board the Club junk if you wish to see fireworks and dine in the spectacular setting of Victoria Harbour. Places are limited, so book fast with Cobo.

Staff changes: Terry Mung, our Food and Beverage Manager, has left the Club for personal reasons after one-and-half years with us. We wish him all the very best in his new venture. His successor will be introduced in the next Horizons magazine.

If you have not yet visited Chef Singh’s new restaurant, Peel 35 Café, in Central, his address is, well, 35 Peel Street. To reserve, call 2818 1236. You will find reasonably priced meals and Chef Singh’s touch on the food side, and Martin still serving with a constant smile on his face. I am sure visits of ABC members will bring Chef Singh, Andy, Martin and Choy Pui Key happiness and courage in their gutsy adventure.

Karen is doing fine selling products and pursuing her goal of becoming a child therapist. Our long-gone Chef Cheung is operating his restaurant in Mid-Levels. If you wish to pay him a visit, go to “Pesto Café,” at 66 Bonham Road.

Flag Officer’s Report

Middle Island was a very busy place during the summer with a wide array of sailing and water sports courses running and large numbers of members and non-members visiting the island. If anything, the high usage of Middle Island pushes us in the Development Committee to double our efforts to get movement on the development plan’s various components. I gave an update on Middle Island in Horizons’ June issue, so this month, I will write about what progress has been made over the summer months. Being the summertime, this has been a little slower than one would wish.

The Development Committee’s planning phase has continued with progress being made in a number of areas. Dialogue is ongoing with the senior levels of the Hong Kong Electric Company and a joint application with RHKYC is still pending with the Water Services Department. Plans are now being finalised to be forwarded to the Home Affairs Bureau and subsequently to the Lands Department. Concurrent with this initial application, a short list of professional contractors (architects and engineers) has been drawn up so that we can move on swiftly with plans as the initial support and permissions are obtained.

If you visit Middle Island, you will see that improvements have been made to the changing room facilities for both the men’s and ladies’ with refurbished shower and toilet cubicles. The lockers will also be upgraded in the next few weeks, as will the sink surrounds and the overall finishing. Thanks to Janice Goh and Dave McConnell for their hard work with the club maintenance team.

The hot weather also allowed a number of members including John Berry and myself to scramble up the old fishermen’s paths on the island. These are overgrown but with a little concerted effort have been made somewhat more accessible. Access is up the rocks behind the barbeque area (south past the mangrove tree) and then up the meandering path that reaches the summit after a 30-minute mildly energizing hike. At the summit there is a triangulation point and a small bamboo flag pole. There are also fantastic panoramic views into Repulse Bay, Stanley Peninsula and to the islands lying beyond. We saw no venomous serpents or other dangerous fauna lurking in the undergrowth, although if you do go for a stroll (at your own risk) you should probably take a mobile phone, a bottle of water and some insect repellent. It takes about

20 minutes to descend. On our next ascent we hope to discover the paths connecting with the RHKYC...

I am very keen to hold a meeting for members and tentatively suggested October as an appropriate date; however, there will be more purpose and information to share at this meeting if we have some response from the various government departments – so please await confirmation of a date. As ever, should you like to drop your thoughts / suggestions in writing at any time to Dev Com, please feel free to do so to my attention, David Tait, care of Philippe de Manny in the General Manager’s office.

Summer Series Sailing: Capricious Winds Tease Dinghys and Cruisers

Kei Lun in East Lamma Channel approaching the Mo Tat Wan finish in Race 3

Dinghy Summer Races 3 and 4

Races 1 and 2 had to be abandoned due to a distinct lack of wind. However, for races 3 and 4 there was ample pressure, almost more wind than boats! A short mix-up occurred at the beginning, when the start boat could not be seen, until it was realised that it was probably in Stanley Bay to recognise the south-southeast wind. Shortly after, a rearranged start was set in Chung Hom Wan with a No. 8 two-lap windward leeward, with the A-mark level with Round Island and C-mark near the islet off South Bay.

After a joint start, the heritage Enterprise Gekko Hotel took the first mark from Minoru Asano in a Laser radial while the Bruce family took their usual leisurely approach in a Laser 2000. Last Spring Series winner Minoru was not to be outdone and came through on both races for line honours, while Matthew Wright just edged out Yann d'Argenlieu in both races after very tight racing.

Race results follow on pages 10 and 11.

Dinghy Summer Series Races 5 and 6, and 7 and 8

All were cancelled, as regrettably the wind was insufficient for the boats drifting at the start in each event.

Cruiser Summer Series - Race 3

The course was #27, around Lamma. In detail: Start - Chesterman - Club Mark (SE Lamma), Power Beacon PB1 - Shek Kok Tsui Beacon - Luk Chau - Finish in Mo Tat Wan), 14 nm. Wind SE Force 4-5. Big ebb tide of 1.7-metre drop. The fleet was reduced by one or two because of the Cruiser Owners' Association's Macau Race and its changed date. Meanwhile, the ABC had eight starters, as a false shark alert kept other boats off the water.

After an easterly start, several boats, led by Kei Lun, put in a long starboard leg at start-up to Repulse Bay, only to find that this was not the making tack and so losing some distance. FfreeFire led the fleet by six minutes at Chesterman. Port pole spinnaker after Chesterman. At the gybe off southwest Lamma, ships at anchor lying to tide in tidal eddies caused ships to swing 90 to 180 degrees in different directions. Boats carried kites up to Yung Shue Wan. J/80s were flattened at times in gusts in good broaches on the close-spinnaker reach up the west side of Lamma, however, their recoveries were quick. A big ebb in Lamma Channel where there were few ships but one hesitant vessel held up some boats.

Kei Lun sailed loosely up the back of Lamma (apparently in crew training rather than racing mode) while those that carried shy spinnakers pointed higher.

A good set of results to see the top five (very dissimilar) boats split by three minutes after HKPN handicapping!

Cruiser Summer Race 4

Before the race, there was much discussion among Sailing Committee members on the course, given the tide, the wind and varying preferences for course finish destinations.

Hana Fe with additional crew

The choice was course #25, another around Lamma, Start - Chesterman - Club mark (SE Lamma) - Lamma (Stbd) - Cheung Chau Rock - Finish in Yung Shue Wan (14.4nm, for those who could sail straight!).

Star finisher of the day was former "Round the Island" race winner and subsequent Waglan Series stalwart Nervous Breakdown, returning to racing with a fine win in this race of 17 starters.

Cruiser Summer Race 5

The choice of course was dominated by a large and long ebb tide together with lightish wind from the east, both of which favoured a course to the east. The course chosen was #23, the long course around Po Toi Island: Start - Chesterman -

Beaufort Island (Stbd) - Fury Rocks (Stbd) - Po Toi Island (Stbd) - Finish in Po Toi (19.4nm).

At the start winds were slight, allowing those quicker to follow wind shifts to take advantage, with FfreeFire getting to Chesterman by 23 minutes, at least a quarter-hour quicker than Redeye. Javelin tried an early tack to Bluff but did not benefit, and the light and changing winds south of the track did not help those who tried that route. The winds veered steadily around to to the southwest, however, and a steady stream of boats passed Fury and found wind of reasonable strength south of Po Toi, with a few hoisting kites on the last leg to the finish past Mat Chau off the Tin Hau temple. Good course for the conditions with all finishing in good time for a café lunch. H

J/80 Sailing at the ABC

Hong Kong now has a fleet of over 20 J/80 keelboats. In 2011, the ABC launched its first-ever keelboat training programme with the aims of encouraging more members to sail, building up first-class racing, and providing a more affordable opportunity for sailors to own and sail a keelboat. The ABC keelboat training programme initially focused on short courses for experienced sailors to earn approval to hire one of the Club's two keelboats, as well as crew courses that act as a stepping stone for dinghy sailors to start sailing larger yachts. The J/80 is ideal for this purpose; a spacious and relatively straightforward keelboat, but with great race performance.

After a successful year, the Club J/80s are now in some demand, and we are launching two new courses to allow members to improve their skills and spend more time on the water.

The J/80 training programme

The full programme is illustrated here, with an explanation below. To attend a Day Skipper Course, the normal pre-requisite is five days' sea time, (including any courses) but more is helpful. The ABC highly recommends the new J/80 gennaker course, which devotes a whole day to safe and efficient downwind sailing. Sailing hours do not need to be via a course; sailing any yacht gives useful additional sea time. Be sure to record your sailing time in a log book.

Find full details and latest course dates on our website, www.abclubhk.com and published in our Club magazine, Horizons.

The International Sailing Federation (ISAF) has organised Youth Sailing World Championships around the world every year since 1971 to promote top-level international youth sailing. Competitors first must qualify to represent their country, with one team in each of eight dinghy and windsurf classes.

The 42nd edition of the championships was held in July 2012 at the Royal St George, National and Royal Irish yacht clubs on Ireland's Dublin Bay. Hong Kong sent a team of five sailors; Michael Cheng in the boys' RSX Windsurfer, Lydia Chau in the girls' RSX Windsurfer, James Johnston in the boys' Laser Radial, Nagisa Sakai in the girls' Laser Radial, Wan Chi Wai and Tse Sui Lun in the boys' 420, and the ABC's Cosmas Grelon and Nathan Bradley in the 29er class. The Hong Kong team was accompanied by coaches Chan King Yin from the Windsurf Association, Chan Yuk Wah from the Hong Kong Sea School, and the Aberdeen Boat Club's dinghy coach, Rory Godman.

Cosmas, who sails at ABC with his crew Nathan Bradley, tells us about his experiences in Dublin:

"Having heard and talked about this event for so long it was unbelievable to finally arrive in Dublin and get ready to compete in the world's hardest youth event. Before arriving in Dublin we were uncertain how we would compare to the best of the best in the world of 29ers and couldn't wait to get on the water.

"Having arrived two days before the practice race we had some time to spare to visit the city in which we were racing, Dublin. Apart from the fact some people were "having a pint" in the morning, the city was basically the same as most other European cities. The next day we were allowed to go and see our boats and start tuning them according to very strict limitations. To our pleasant surprise, the boats were new and from the best 29er boat builder, Ovington. After a few hours of tuning the boat, making sure everything was as well set-up as possible and putting on as many layers of warm weather gear we could, we went out for a sail! Having done some geographical research of the harbour and sailing area before our arrival, it was indeed a memorable moment when we got out of the harbour for the first time with our kite up going about 12 knots. It was then that it really struck me that we were here; we were at the Youth Worlds 2012.

"After the first few races we were in a strong position to achieve our initial target of top 10 with only a few points between us and the 10th boat. But as the week progressed especially towards the last few races, our results started to drop and this did not help our overall standing. Losing several places in the last few days was disappointing, but we had to move on as only a few days later we were due on the water in Travemünde, Germany, for the 29er World Championships.

"We finished up 18th overall; while not as good as hoped, a reasonable result. Nevertheless, we had an awesome time on and off the water, meeting loads of new people from all over the world. I am definitely looking forward to the qualifications for next year already! I feel better prepared and know we can improve greatly next year. Learning from other top sailors, identifying our weaknesses, and getting a good understanding of this event all bodes well for 2013!

"I would like to thank our coach, Rory Godman, for all the time and effort he has put into building the ABC High Performance team, and providing us with high-level coaching. Thanks also to ABC for supporting the 29er vision, and funding Rory's trip – without the coach none of this would be possible."

"Toughest competition I've ever seen, one mistake and you lose places immediately; everyone was so serious it wasn't even funny."

ABC Sailors Lead Hong Kong Contingent at 2012 29er World Championships in Germany

JG Brashier and Louis Bond-Smith

The Aberdeen Boat Club sent six sailors and three boats to the 29er World Championships in Travemünde, Germany, from 22 – 28 July 2012. Sailors Lars Schkade, Akira Sakai, JG Brasier and Louis Bond-Smith arrived early, with Cosmas Grelon, Nathan Bradley and Coach Rory Godman coming straight from the ISAF Youth Worlds in Ireland and appearing the day before the event started. We had to charter three boats which were not in great condition but put up with what we were given. The ABC team stayed in three cabins we booked at a local camping ground; not too bad with lots of space for the boys. The sailing venue was very basic, just a massive park with a tent as the race office, but the rest of the town was set up for sailors and visitors with lots of food stalls and a few entertainment tents.

The ABC squad was joined by another six sailors and Coach Nick from the Royal Hong Kong Yacht Club, so that the entire Hong Kong contingent numbered 12 sailors, six boats and two coaches!

The week leading up to the Worlds saw strong winds between 20 and 30 knots. Akira and Lars had spent many days in this wind strength and were very confident of their speed and ability in those conditions. But looking ahead at the long-range forecast it wasn't meant to be, with very light winds forecast for the whole week.

Race day one started with the wind at eight to 15 knots, and then finished with around three knots. The sailors had an eye-opener as the big starts made the racing really hard. Cosmas and Nathan were given a black flag, but as they were pushed over by a boat they decided to protest and won, but did not get redress on that race. We didn't get home from the sailing club until 11 pm so it was great to find that Clyde and Maggie, Nathan's parents, had made the team a hot meal.

Day two started at 10 am with more very light conditions. With the wind only up at five or six knots, our teams really were struggling to get off the start line. Akira and Lars managed to get two black flags which wasn't a great start to the day. JG and Louis started to improve and showed good downwind speed.

Day three, the last day of the qualification round, had the same light conditions with at most perhaps 10 knots. At this point our goal was to try to put some damage control on the black flags we had scored, and get some scores to count. Cosmas and Nathan managed a third in their last race. At the end of the qualification round, Cosmas and Nathan made Silver Fleet, the only Hong Kong boat to do so, while JG, Louis, Akira and Lars all made Emerald.

The start of the 29er Worlds: the ABC sent six sailors for three boats

With the fleet of 216 boats now divided into four fleets, the finals comprised between seven and 10 races for each fleet leading to overall results and fleet results.

In the Silver Fleet, the boys sailed well, managing some top 10 results. We could really see the learning curve starting to go up and the rewards starting to come in. On the last day, Cosmas and Nathan had some bad luck; with good wind and sitting in around eighth place a boat ahead of them rounded the top mark and hoisted its gennaker. As it went up that boat sailed into the boys and its gennaker-retrieval line got caught around Nathan's neck, pulling him off the boat, which then capsized. They managed to finish the day racing but after sailing Nathan went to the local hospital where he spent the night. After a MRI scan, Nathan got the all-clear but this was not a good way to end a great campaign and their results suffered badly as there were three races sailed on the last day. Nathan and Cosmas ended up 20th in the Silver Fleet and the leading Hong Kong boat overall.

Conditions remained light for the ABC boats in the Emerald Fleet, with large wind shifts, sometimes up to 50 degrees. Akira and Lars were in need of the wind to jump a couple of places but it never came. JG and Louis were great, improving very much during the regatta and showing great promise for the future with JG being one of the youngest competitors at 13.

Overall the team showed a steep learning curve which is what we need to reach the top level, and improved a huge amount. Particular mention must again go to JG as a sailor with huge potential for the future.

The ABC Youth Racing Team would like to thank Clyde and Maggie Bradley for all the help when away, SLAM for helping us with sailing gear and the ABC for covering coach costs – coaching would not have been possible without ABC support.

Hong Kong Team at 29er Worlds, ABC squad in black, RHKYC sailors in red

The 29er World Championships was "far more fun than the ISAF Worlds, with a far larger fleet and racing against adults as well as youth sailors. A disappointing start to the regatta prevented us from doing better on the overall standing and perhaps getting into the Gold Fleet which would have been a great achievement. I think we were tired physically from the previous regatta which was already a week or so long. Hopefully we get continued support from the Club to carry on and go to the 29er Worlds next year in Denmark!"

The heart of dinghy activity at the ABC is youth sailing. During every school holiday, we run courses and activities for children and teenagers of ABC members and non-members alike, though participation priority is given to members' children. Look for the summer 2013 schedule around Easter.

Summer Youth Sailing Programme 2012

This summer, the ABC teaching team ran some 31 courses. Approximately 55 percent of attendees were children of non-members, reflecting the courses' effectiveness and appeal to the wider community across Hong Kong. Our most popular activities remain the Junior Optimist sailing courses, which continue to attract large numbers of children onto the water.

The Club also held two successful Watersports Weeks, which introduce the children to sailing, kayaking, windsurfing, wakeboarding, snorkeling, and other fun watersports elements. Optimist Race Training with Coach Rory Godman also continued as part of our busy summer schedule and in preparation for the upcoming regatta season.

The key element in any successful activity is the instructor. The Club was pleased to welcome back a number of experienced and skilled instructors, all of whom did a great job throughout the summer weeks. Support from the Marine and F&B staff also contributed to a great summer – thanks to all!

Autumn 2012 Adult Dinghy Sailing

For adults, the ABC has organized many different dinghy activities this autumn:

Adult Beginner Courses

The ABC's Adult Learn-to-Sail programme continues, with courses for beginners scheduled as follows. Each course runs for five days and leads to a formal certificate from the Hong Kong Sailing Federation. Sailors use Pico and Laser 2000 dinghies.

September: 15, 16, 22, 23, 29

October: 14, 20, 21, 27, 28

November: 3, 10, 11, 17, 18

December: 8, 9, 15, 16, 22

Adult Laser 2000 Course

The ideal "next step" after a beginner course, or a great way to refresh dinghy sailing skills. Day one focuses on rigging and review of basic techniques, day two introduces the third downwind "gennaker" sail, and day three looks at racing.

These popular courses are usually always full, so apply early:

September: 15, 16, 22

December 8, 9, 15

Adult HKSF Level 3 Course

This course covers more advanced seamanship skills, boat handling and theory. Limited opportunities are available to run adult level 3 courses at weekends, and the Club normally schedules courses during winter when we can expect more wind. Sailors normally use Laser 1 and Laser 2000 dinghies. January 2013: 5, 6, 12, 13, 19

Supervised Sailing

The ABC continues to expand our Saturday afternoon Supervised Sailing Programme, giving dinghy sailors the opportunity to sail with an instructor who can help out and offer tips to improve sailing skills.

Sessions run most Saturday afternoons and start at Middle Island at 1.30 pm.

J/80 Keelboat Sailing

The ABC recommends that early sailing lessons take place in a dinghy, to fully appreciate all the elements of sailing and gain a good understanding of basic techniques. However, many people want to sail larger keelboats and even dream of owning their own yacht one day. The ABC offers regular J/80 Crew courses.

Further details can be found in this copy of Horizons as well as on the ABC website. The next J/80 Competent Crew courses will run October 2, 6 and 7 and December 8, 9 and 15.

For details and application forms for all these activities, see our Club website, www.abclubhk.com or email our Sailing Secretary at SailingSecretary@abclubhk.com

Jungle Jane Part II:

Bali to Hong Kong

Words and photos by David Harris

The second of a two-part instalment recounting a yachting journey from western Australia to Hong Kong. For part one, Perth to Bali on Jungle Jane, see Horizons' July/August issue.

Opposite: One of hundreds of small sandy islands we passed whilst tracking north along the eastern side of Palawan Island in the Philippines
Top: At 6'5" tall, Ed Bell attracted plenty of new friends at the Sandakan fisherman's wharf

Thirty years of mass-market tourism in Bali largely have trashed what once must have been a lovely island. After four days in port in Bali, we left with a black cloud over the boat. Getting fuel, provisioning and clearing customs had turned into a rather pathetic comedy that filled our time with frustration to a point where I had a complete sense of humour failure. Ed Bell was also getting no sympathy from me whilst nursing the mother of hangovers after an all-night session with a group of lads holidaying from Sydney. Wisely, Mac Greer kept a low profile until the mood lifted as night fell on our first night at sea.

Whilst not an ocean crossing, at just over 1,000 nautical miles, this leg of our journey from Bali to Hong Kong was our longest. We tracked due north across the equator up through the Makassar Strait between Borneo and Sulawesi. Cruising blogs indicated there could be pirates in the northwest part of the Makassar Strait, so I decided to stick to the main shipping channel. This meant we were out of sight of land for the whole leg until we turned the corner towards Sandakan, by then in Philippine waters.

I think the risk of pirate activity in this region is very low. Petty crime in port is probably a bigger hazard than piracy at sea. Nevertheless, we were comforted by the fact that Jungle Jane has 1000 h.p. up her sleeve and can wind up to 25 knots which would be more than enough to drag off the locals if necessary.

Whole mountains of iron ore from Australia are being transported to China, Korea and Taiwan through this sea lane. I picked up a piece of high-grade iron ore from Geraldton that now sits on my desk in Hong Kong, so we were also doing our bit for our balance of trade! Seas were generally mild, but on the third day out, we encountered sustained thunderstorms and 25 – 30 knots with heavy rain for most of the afternoon and night. Jungle Jane is an excellent sea boat but with the wheelhouse and accommodation well forward she is very uncomfortable in a short head sea. Luck had it that a huge ore carrier was passing down our port side so I radioed the ship on VHF and asked if we could slot in behind for a smoother track.

The master was a bit puzzled as to why a Western Australian crayfishing boat should be tracking north of Borneo but was very obliging and offered to slow down if it would help us. I assured him we could keep up. The ship, Global Trust out of western Australia's Port Hedland, was bound for Korea and making about 12 knots. I estimate she was at least 200,000 tonnes, so we spent a few hours astern and in her lee, before thanking them and wishing them goodbye and good luck.

“The master was a bit puzzled as to why a Western Australian crayfishing boat should be tracking north of Borneo ”

We could not take on water in Bali so only had bottled drinking water on this leg. When it rained we manoeuvred under the cloud and stripped off for a deck wash and rather pathetic efforts to collect rain water. Generally, it was stiflingly hot and we slept on deck with the only breeze being the apparent wind from the movement of the boat.

Three years ago, on the delivery of our yacht V1 from Sydney to Hong Kong, we had had a tragedy aboard en route to Sandakan. A crew member had a sudden heart attack and died in the cockpit. It was 40 hours before his body could be removed upon arrival in Sandakan and the crew were deeply affected by the loss and trauma of dealing with this situation.

Three of a few young boys who rowed out a half-mile from their village in the Philippines to see us; great little boat handlers. The youngest is working out how to take the wrapper off a sweet we gave them.

Drawing crowds

This time, however, we arrived in perfect weather, tying up amongst the fishermen at the town jetty. Ed Bell is a strapping 6'5" 28-year old, so whenever we tied up with the local fishermen, both Ed and Jungle Jane drew a crowd. Despite not understanding a word we always got on famously with the fishermen. They were fascinated by what fish we would catch with such a boat and where we had picked up such a giant crewman.

We enjoyed Sandakan and cleansed ourselves of the traumas of our last visit. Getting fuel, stores and clearances was straightforward and we enjoyed the hospitality of the yacht club. My wife Jane also joined us for the 550-mile trip north via the Palawan Islands to Subic Bay.

We had now broken the back of the trip so took our time during this leg. We visited Puerto Princesa on Good Friday for a few hours. The Philippines is primarily a Catholic country so the place was completely shut down for the day. The tuk-tuk driver apologised because, he said, "God has died and everyone was resting for the day." I said it would be okay because "He was going to come back on Sunday and things would probably come good thereafter!".

Island-hopping in the Philippines

We spent four days island-hopping and enjoying the company of the locals. One afternoon we anchored off a small island and joined in on a family birthday party with four generations of babies, cousins, uncles, aunts and grandparents. They had great food but very cheap brandy and no beer so we supplied some Australian wine, which they loved. One old woman had a music box so the adults danced to the scratchy tunes on the beach, much to the embarrassment of the teenagers who thought the adults, including our crew, were being ridiculous.

It's a solid 150 miles from the northern Palawan islands to Subic Bay in the Philippines and with a stiff easterly and lumpy sea we quickly slotted back into passage mode. About 20 miles north of Busuanga Island, we noticed something odd on the horizon, so altered course to port to investigate. It turned out to be three men and a lad in a small motorised outrigger canoe frantically waving a bag to attract attention. They had already drifted 10 miles and out of sight of land and the next stop for them was China or Vietnam 700 miles away - an impossible situation in such a boat. The lad was terrified but the men just seemed resigned to their fate. We took them in tow, and even at seven knots, which is just above idle for us, I was afraid their boat would fall to pieces. Our fuel supply was reasonably tight, so I didn't want to go back 20 miles, and set a course for an island not far off our course toward Subic Bay.

There was much protestation from our new friends but with increasing wind and sea conditions I ignored this to make for the closest land. Within an hour we saw a speck on the horizon which turned out to be more fishermen so we upped the speed to intercept them, hoping to hand over our charges. Eventually we rendezvoused and passed our now much-happier charges to their colleagues. One wonders how many fishermen just never come home in the Philippines. Simple distress flares would save many lives but even rudimentary safety equipment is beyond their resources.

How the “other half” live

After a rough night we arrived at Subic Bay Yacht Club and were allocated a berth alongside the 54-metre super yacht Double Haven. There are some smart boats in the Subic Bay marina so Double Haven must have wondered who they had struck. We got on well with the largely New Zealand crew and even hosted them to a barbeque on Jungle Jane to show them how the other half live.

Subic Bay is quite a good yachting service centre and the Club is now well-run and has excellent facilities. We spent two weeks working on the boat at Subic Bay. Labour is US$15/per day so I paid $25 and we had a queue of workers every day. We achieved a lot, slowly turning Jungle Jane into a boat we can use for entertaining.

Jane and Mac left the boat there and my son, Angus, joined Ed and me for the trip across the South China Sea to Hong Kong. Typically, as we approached Hong Kong, the northeast monsoon piped in and the South China Sea lived up to its reputation for short and nasty sea conditions.

Only 20 miles from Hong Kong, whilst steaming into blinding rain and a 25-knot headwind, there was a flash of lightning that illuminated a large fishing trawler heaved to without lights about 100 metres ahead. But for our sudden alteration of course, we would have almost certainly run them down at 12 knots in the black of night. This is a good example of the lack of seamanship so prevalent in and around Hong Kong.

We came alongside the ABC pontoon after midnight in the pouring rain. In the morning General Manager Philippe de Manny came down to say hello, saying “My goodness, where did you get that thing from?” With a smile I said, “Oh, we’ve just driven it up from Perth.” It was nice to be home. ✨

The Shocking Side of Sailing

Words by the ABC's David Tait, in conversation with Captain R.J. Carrick, RN

Bafflement about why the sails won't work

On the edge of the Surrey Hills there is a pub called The Red Lion. In July, during one of the rare warmer evenings before the London Olympics, I met up with an old shipmate from my days in the Royal Navy; we reminisced about seas sailed and life well-lived.

Richard Carrick (Ric) and I had served together in the early '80s in HMS Bristol (a fine vessel for cocktail parties) off West Africa and later operationally in the nuclear-attack submarine HMS Sovereign (a Cold War killer of the deep) in the Mediterranean and the North Atlantic. As young naval officers we had shared a number of exciting experiences but agreed that one stood out as the most terrifying by far – the time we were sent sailing together.

Bewildered submariners

When a submarine comes in for maintenance and a fresh coat of black paint, the Royal Navy in its wisdom sends younger officers and sailors off to places like the Joint Services Adventurous Sail Training Centre (JSASTC) – to be trained in things like “Sailing” and “Adventure.” Ric and I, as a pair of young lieutenants, were sent and duly reported to JSASTC with 10 of our submarine's crew to join HMSTC Dasher, a lovely Nicholson 55' yacht. We were to sail from Gosport, southern England, to Copenhagen, Denmark, before giving the yacht to another group of equally bewildered submariners to bring it back again – and thus have an adventure.

Dasher, which was most unlike a submarine, had a full-time coxswain appointed to her – a retired chief petty officer, a salty seahorse called Charlie Solomon. He had been an aviator in the past (submariners are okay with aviation types as we spend lots of time trying to help them find us during exercises). In any event, Chief Solomon knew how to make the yacht go forward, which we certainly didn't. We were also joined by a nameless more-senior officer who was a surface flotilla meteorological specialist – he was to be in command of the yacht (and the weather) and had a lot of RYA qualifications that we were told was a good thing. We duly loaded up with victuals and beer, setting sail on a sunny March morning in 1989, moving into the Solent and then through the English Channel into the North Sea. It was flat calm.

Ascertaining that the sails didn't work well without wind, we soon were chugging under comfortable power quite happily – just like an aircraft carrier. The senior rates sorted the crew into two watches and happily settled down to fishing for mermaids and mooning at passing Channel ferries. The flat calm continued. On the third evening at sea, having left Calais, Dunkirk and Ostend well to our east and out of sight of land, the weather began to pick up.

We hoisted our sails for our sailing adventure and switched off the engine. The North Sea can be tricky in spring, and soon we were bucking up and down like a lady of negotiable virtue, resenting the rising gale and our inability to dive to 500 feet as we sailed into the brooding darkness. We therefore furled our sails – somehow they didn't seem to work in too much wind either (42 knots). As evening fell we hoisted a storm jib that was reefed into something sensible.

Whilst pondering our inability to drink warm drinks safely in the mounting seas, a cumulonimbus building up above us in the deepening purple was accumulating a very positive charge that shortly was going to induce a very negative charge below.

“We duly loaded up with victuals and beer, setting sail on a sunny March morning in 1989, moving into the Solent and then through the English Channel into the North Sea. It was flat calm.”

Finding the only discharge point in an angry sea, lightning struck the mast of Dasher at around 10:30 pm with around 30,000 amps, transferring around 500 megajoules of energy to the yacht and surrounding sea.

That made a jolly big bang.

All those on watch in the cockpit were harnessed and in full foul-weather gear with life jackets, hanging on for dear life, when the yacht sparked up. I had the helm with Ric beside me. When lightening hits, you lose your night vision and the shock wave is very memorable – Ric's first comment was “that just went through my *ing teeth.”

Then the lights went out. Submariners train constantly for EOPs (Emergency Operating Procedures) in the dark. These supersede SOPs (Standard Operating Procedures) in the light and also when things are no longer “inside the envelope.” As we were merely on an adventure, we didn't really know what the EOPs were for Dasher, but we did know immediately that it was very dark and that a lot of things were not right with the vessel. Someone shouted “Flood!,” someone else “Fire!” and it was time to come to emergency stations.

Some things went wrong

Some of the things that had gone wrong included a major flood in the forward cabin from behind the heads; an unconscious Leading Steward Bardolph with his hair standing on end and his trousers around his ankles, with what appeared to be singed buttocks and no pulse; a couple of good-sized fires in the engine space; the explosion of the VHF radio; the disintegration of all navigational instruments; the radar dead and smouldering; no lighting; no power; little sense of direction; three cables of visibility (600 yards); a storm jib flapping mindlessly; an ongoing gale with 18-24 feet waves with a real risk of broaching.

It appeared that Dasher was beginning to behave rather more like a submarine than anticipated.

Chief Solomon did have an immediate sense of the peril we were in and the crew, with one notable exception, acted brilliantly – the fire was doused and the flood slowed by pushing several pillows and some soft wood wedges into the leak. We gave CPR to the recently dead leading steward, who, once restarted, was ordered to pull up his trousers, not to sit down and to work out how to make tea. Unoccupied crew started bailing and pumping without an order. We started a stopwatch, pricked the chart and started working out our dead reckoning using a Zippo lighter as a candle.

Being rammed was a concern

Without any navigational lights within 50 nm of Rotterdam, being rammed by shipping was a passing concern. The jib was brought under some level of seamanlike operability by Chief Solomon and we ran before the wind towards the distant Dutch coast and away from the main shipping lanes. For the moment we were a bit damp but all still alive in a fine seaworthy vessel. The unnamed meteorological officer, nominally in command of the yacht, however, suffered a loss of moral fibre and wanted to launch the life raft and abandon the yacht – he was very RYA-overqualified. Having heard this stunning order, a squeaky voice from the darkened foredeck said, “Is that really a good idea, Sir?,” which was followed by a loud “thwack” from Ric as a junior sailor learnt yet again when to shut up.

Moving away from the scheme to abandon one of Her Majesty’s floating assets as a navigational hazard, we set about getting to safety. By now we had found a torch, a compass, binoculars, a sextant, a towed log, a gas-burning stove and 400 dry Benson and Hedges – and hadn’t lost any of our beer.

“We gave CPR to the recently dead leading steward, who was ordered to pull up his trousers, not to sit down and to work out how to make tea.”

Ric – the senior engineer – worked out quite quickly that the now-extinguished fire curiously had destroyed both the starter motors of the generator and the diesel engine. Power and useful propulsion were not going to be a possibility. The communications equipment was not going to work any time soon nor would the radar, the depth sounder, or Decca navigation equipment (of pre-GPS days).

Pretence of a sextant

In any event, partly to reassure the cold and tired crew that we knew where we were, I went through the total pretence that I could use a sextant in the tempestuous darkness without a visible horizon, shooting the lower limb of the moon through scudding clouds. Once everybody was reassured that we knew where we were (other than myself and Ric, who knew I was bluffing), the crew happily turned on the meteorologist of questionable moral fibre, giving him a really hard time about the ghastly weather and forcing him yet again to explain why he thought he’d be safer in a life raft (submariners can be rather cruel).

Left to solve my navigational conundrum on my own, I scrambled through the North Sea Pilot and deduced that I had seen the Newcastle-Ijmuiden ferry that had crossed to the south of Den Helder just before dusk. Steering east-north-east, I ran a probability pool-of-errors – a submariners’ technique to navigate within a statistical probability area, when you haven’t had a fix for some time underwater (which anyone can use even if non-RYA-qualified) – and set course towards northern Holland. Frantically, Ric and I read the names on the sterns of coastal fishing boats, guessing that we were nearing Den Helder or at least the low-lying island of Texel. Two hours after dawn, we made landfall within 3 nm of the centre of the PE. We entered the home port of the Royal Netherlands Navy under sail, all pretending that we knew how to sail and all save Ric thinking that I knew how to navigate.

So why had the sailing experience been quite so adventurous? Well, it all came down to the dockyard that had refitted the yacht a few years earlier. They had decided to earth the lightening conductor to the brass hull valve behind the heads. It was Leading Steward Bardolph’s misfortune to be sitting on the stainless-steel trap when the lightening hit. In absorbing some of the 500 megajoules of energy, he was propelled head-first through the heads’ door with his smouldering buttocks firmly clenched and his hair on end. He may or may not have suffered a cardiac arrest; it was too cold and wet to find a pulse and CPR seemed to do the trick. The fires and flood were explained because the dockyard had also earthed all the navigational instruments, the starter motor and the generator through the same earth point, thus making a rough circuit. With that amount of energy hitting the yacht it was enough to blow the valve clean out of the side of the vessel and cause the other systems’ cataclysmic malfunctions.

We patched up the yacht in Holland, spent three evenings retelling each other what fun our adventure had been, and then sailed Dasher back to England and gave her back to the authorities before rejoining the safety of our hunter-killer submarine. HMSTC Dasher is still afloat today and, at the time of writing, is sailing through the Straits of Gibraltar on another adventure. H

Father and Son Spice Up Club's Indian Menu

ABC GM Philippe de Manny knows a good thing when he sees one – or two. In 2003 he poached Chef Ramakant Yadav for his Indian cooking skills and flair after working with Yadav at the Ladies' Recreation Club in the 1990's. In April 2012 the GM did it again: he hired Chef Yadav's son Susanta Kumar Yadav ("Kumar") to join the ABC's father-and-son cooking team.

Chef Yadav came to cooking in a very hands-on way, learning through helping a cook from Nepal living in his home town near Cuttack, in Orissa state, in eastern India. Yadav came to Hong Kong in 1994 as a chef at the LRC, moving to the Harbour Plaza Hotel until the ABC's de Manny hired him away.

Yadav speaks Oriya, Hindi, English and some Cantonese, helpful in the ABC kitchen. "Working at the ABC is good," Chef Yadav says, the highlight of his cooking career in Hong Kong. "Everyone helps; nobody argues." Yadav intends to continue with the ABC for another five or six years until he retires.

Son Chef Kumar comes to the ABC after working at the Hong Kong Country Club, the Football Club and several Indian restaurants in Hong Kong. The extended Yadav family, including Kumar's five-month old daughter, live together with Chef Yadav's daughter – and Kumar's sister – Kamlesh, in Hong Kong.

New Indian menu every six months

Chef Yadav says he never looks at a cookbook. "I have over 100 recipes in my head and often make up new recipes." He often develops recipes by considering the elements of a Chinese or western dish and then making it Indian-style.

ABC Chefs Ramakant Yadav (L) and son Kumar Yadav (R)

Yadav regularly makes fresh raita and naan bread in the ABC kitchen. He is particularly pleased with his new starters, including garamsalal. Members like his vindaloos, he says, especially in winter. General Manager de Manny particularly recommends the Kukurmuttera Paneer Mutter, a dry curry, accompanied by any English ale.

Chef Yadav, says General Manager de Manny, is very creative with Indian, western and Chinese cuisine, while his son Kumar is more oriented toward fusion cooking, combining Indian and European approaches. Kumar's dish of stuffed squid with mustard and port wine is "outstanding," de Manny says. Both Yadav and Kumar can cook in the styles of northern, southern and western India. Kumar says he is extending his cooking approach and developing new recipes by moving to an older style of Indian cuisine, using less oil and boosting natural flavours.

The mouth feel is intense and complex with refined and interwoven flavours that deliver both texture and richness balancing nicely with fresh vibrant lime and lemon flavours.	$110
Château Chante l'Oiseau AOC Graves 2010, Loire Valley, France Typical Graves - the dryness of Sauvignon softened by the creaminess of Semillon with plenty of minerality in the finish. Refreshing crisp wine as a change from straight Sauvignon Blanc.	$110
Ash Ridge Chardonnay 2010, Hawke's Bay, New Zealand Light gold in colour with aromas of stone fruit with a hint of oak. White peach and nectarine on the palate with a rich mouthfeel and balanced acidity.	$160
Red Wines
Nga Waka Pinot Noir 2010, Martinborough, New Zealand Crammed with fresh, vibrant fruit flavours, this wine has a Central Otago-like immediacy of appeal. Deeply coloured, it is invitingly scented, with a subtle seasoning of oak, gentle tannins and loads of buoyant cherryish, plummy flavour. 89 Points Bob Campbell	$200
Willunga 100 Shiraz 2010, McLaren Vale, South Australia The palate is rich and juicy, with plush plum and blackberry fruit, the tannins soft and round. 92 Points James Halliday	$120
Bodegas Navajas Reserva 2005, Rioja, Spain (Tempranillo) Flavours of ripe cherry fruits, toasted spices and subtle oak with herbal and balsamic bouquet. A great Rioja to drink on its own or with strong cheeses, red meats and game.	$150
Castello Banfi Rosso Di Montalcino DOC 2010, Tuscany, Italy The bouquet is intense, fresh, fruity with typical varietal characteristics of violet, cherry and plum. On the palate it is gentle, wide, and soft, with surprising length. 90 Points Robert Parker	$200
Koonara Angel's Peak Cabernet Sauvignon 2009, Coonawarra, Australia Intense blackberry and mocha neatly balanced with the vanilla from the French oak barrels. Finishes with an extremely long palate of dried mulberries and cigar box. All Koonara reds, this wine has a balanced sweetness to the finish, showing the goodness of the fruit.	$180

Hebe Haven Yacht Club's 24-Hour Dinghy Race 6 and 7 October: Register Now for ABC's Youth and Adult Teams

The Hebe Haven Yacht Club has announced the 10th running of the 24-hour Charity Dinghy Race, to be held between Saturday 6 October at 2 pm and Sunday 7 October at 2 pm.

The 24-Hour Charity Race is a highlight of Hong Kong's dinghy sailing calendar. As in previous years, the ABC will enter youth and adult teams, and encourages as many members as possible to take part. This year, the ABC will enter Wayfarer, Laser 2000 and RS Feva teams.

Those interested should email Diana Bruce at jollyfin@netvigator.com to register as part of the team. Last year, a number of sailors contacted us to register just a few days before, which complicated organising the team. Therefore, this year, please email Diana on or before Monday 24 September to register. Don't miss this great event!

ABC Swimming Gala

Saturday, 22 September, 11 am

Races: Front crawl, breast stroke, back stroke and medley.

Family races to include parents and a rubber ring race for all ages.

The swim gala will conclude with a prize-giving.

$20 registration fee per event.
For details, contact ABC Membership Services
Manager Cobo Liu by 20 Sept.
at mbs@abclubhk.com or 2553 3032.

ABC Member's Thanks to Club for Support

By David Rees

The ABC is there for you! Yes, it's true that there can be more to our Club than the very welcome pool, food and Middle Island barbecues.

Marine and Clubhouse services really are important to those of us with boats or living aboard. The ABC came through yet again for our family during Typhoon Kai-Tak on 16 August. While a boat in the shelter is safe, the combination of wind and water can make for an interesting time.

And so it was on a Thursday evening that we were banging against the dock, uncomfortable, then deciding to head for the hospitality of the Waglan Bar!

Unexpectedly, we had an excellent evening with friends watching the weather develop, while Club staff set up temporary accommodations in the chart room and a coffee line for the morning. This time, we were the only people at the Club overnight; other times it has been more lively.

Let it be said the ABC again lived up to its motto of "Friendliest Club in Hong Kong." So much so that our son Edward, 12, asked on our departure Friday morning, "Do we need to check out?"

Well, it was not quite as comfortable as a hotel, but the Rees family is every bit as grateful for the excellent service and care as if it were. Thank you, ABC!
